

TO HOLD ANTI-WAR TOWN MEETING

MOKENA PTA PROGRAM VERY INSTRUCTIVE

One of the finest programs the Mokena PTA has sponsored during the school year was presented on Tuesday night at the school auditorium. Preceding the guest speaker C. L. Jordan of the Joliet township schools, Mrs. S. Nebeker, PTA president, read a very fitting article from the National Parent and Teachers Magazine which follows:

"The events of the past months have brought to parents and teachers in an extremely vivid manner the significance of the theme chosen for the twentieth annual observance of American Education Week: 'Education for the common defense.' Since the only social group which has withstood virtually all disintegrating forces is the family, parents and teachers look here to find the first line of defense. A system of education which recognizes this precious social heritage as the main spring of our society goes a long way toward safeguarding not only the threshold but the stronghold of American democracy. Such education throws a defending wall around the very place where human resources are developed, individual liberties are perpetuated, and spiritual life is enriched.

"Our second line of defense in America lies in our public schools. It need scarcely be pointed out that this institution guards the American way of life and makes it real for our children and youth. Self-realization, human relationships, economic efficiency, civic responsibility—we have only begun to realize the distinctive value of these purposes and to translate them into the language of individual and group activities. These purposes are armaments, and these armaments are the congenial companions of peace.

"Our third line of defense consists in an adequately developed community consciousness. It is to the community that we should learn to look more and more as the guardian of our common welfare. Education must defend the great gains already made, in recognizing that every member of the community stands in a meaningful relationship to every other, that he shares a common life, common aspirations and struggles. From every point of view—political, economic, religious, and cultural—the community life for which education equips the coming generation should be and can be a creation of beauty, breeding understanding, tolerance, mutual interest and fellowship.

"It is our great hope and resolve that the democratic way of life shall always be the American way of life. For this we strive, defending at all times the institutions of government and peace—the home, the church, the school, and the community."

Mr. Jordan then presented his views on the subject "Adopting Education to Youth" which were enthusiastically received by the audience. The speaker pointed out, that because of the rapidly changing times and conditions, the youth of today is confronted with many complex problems such as past generations did not know. The speaker left the impression that he is a born educator, who knows and understands youth. There was a good attendance and it was an evening well spent.

After the program delicious refreshments were served by Mesdames Steele, Geffert, Dunn and Ida Benson.

The PTA wishes to announce that on April 24th, 25th and 26th a play under the direction of Mrs. King of Palos Park, will be presented in the school auditorium. The next meeting will be devoted to honoring the past presidents of the Mokena PTA.

Guy Colby To Direct Square Dance At Tinley Feb. 8

Saturday night, Feb. 8th Guy Colby, well known WLS national barn dance announcer and director of square dances will appear and direct a WLS barn dance at the Tinley Park school under the sponsorship of the Tinley Park Vol. Fire Department. In addition to the square dancing there will be other entertainment. Be sure to take in this evening of wholesome fun.

Milk Men Meet In Joliet Saturday

Saturday, Feb. 1st the members of District 13 of the Pure Milk Association will hold their annual meeting and election of officers in the St. John Hall in Joliet.

Howard Klett who has served as a director of the local for many years, it is reported, will not be a candidate for re-election. It is understood that Chas. Erickson of Mokena will be a candidate for director. He has been identified with the Association for many years.

Lone Eagle Soars Again

When some years ago Charles A. Lindbergh flew across the Atlantic Ocean on that first historic flight, millions of Americans admired the calm, cool courage which enabled him to carry out his purpose. He had blazed a new trail, a shorter and faster way to bridge the Ocean.

Recently he again displayed that same calm, cool courage, clear thinking and farsightedness when he appeared before Congress, ready to defend an issue which is rather unpopular at present among a large proportion of our people. He is again trying to blaze a new trail towards the goal of PEACE, a way that leads ABOVE the ocean of war hysteria, the fog of fear, prejudice and conflicting emotions.

When Lindbergh first advocated the idea of airplane travel as a regular way of transportation across the Atlantic, it was considered by many impractical. It has been proven otherwise. In fact, during this critical present time it has proven to be the safest method of travel to Europe.

Why can't there also be a quicker and better road to peace? One that doesn't mean years of struggle and bloodshed, destruction of property that was the work of generations, a fight until one or the other of the participants are crushed to earth. After all, what would either side gain that they could not have if they stopped fighting right now? Of course it would mean that they must all pocket their pride and say "We've all been fools, let's see if we can't settle our difficulties if all of us make some concessions."

Impossible! Impractical! we hear. Maybe so at present. But wouldn't it be better if our nation used our influence along that line instead of helping prolong the war?

Let us hope that in the future the new road of arbitration shall be shown to be the best and safest way to settle differences among nations.

Tonight Last Chance To See Big Radio Revue at New Lenox

Tonight is the last night of the big radio revue at the New Lenox school auditorium sponsored by the New Lenox Band Association. A most excellent program was presented to a very enthusiastic audience last night and will again be featured tonight. Radio talent appearing on the Morris B. Sach's and WCLS radio programs are the headliners of the revue. Be sure and see the revue to-night (Friday.)

Woman's Club To Hold Public Tea

The Women's Club of Frankfort will sponsor a public tea on Feb. 20 in the auditorium of the Public School.

The main speaker will be Mrs. Leonard Jacobs, who is a Dutch refugee of Amsterdam, Holland. The meeting will begin at 2:15 p.m. and a general admission will be charged. The public is invited to attend and tickets may be secured by contacting any club member. Everyone is urged to try and be present.

The meeting will be educational as well as an entertaining event.

Frankfort Civic Club To Hold Amateur Show

The Frankfort Civic Club will sponsor an amateur show for two nights, Thursday and Friday, Feb. 13th and 14th at 8 p. m., in the Frankfort school gym.

There will be speciality numbers each night. Prizes will be given as follows: first $5; second $4; third $3; fourth $2; fifth $1 also $5 for best novelty number.

The local Root Diggers will appear on both shows.

Arthur Lambrecht of Frankfort will serve as the master of ceremonies with Miss Lillian Collins as accompanist.

An audition will be held on Sunday afternoon, Feb. 9th at the Frankfort school gym.

Rock Island To Build Shelter

Since the Rock Island has made a new safety ruling at New Lenox requiring passengers boarding west bound trains to board the trains on the north side of the west bound main line track, passengers are being compelled to stand out in the open while waiting for the train to pull up to the station. In order to overcome this, a shelter is to be erected and the materials for same have arrived. Work on the shelter will start soon.

Essence of Democracy

Boy Scouts throughout the country celebrate the 31st anniversary of the movement in America during the week of Feb. 7-13. While the slogan on the poster above emphasizes the fact that "Scouting strengthens and invigorates democracy" all America agrees that Scout membership is in itself the essence of democracy.

Celebrate 25th Wedding Anniversary

Supervisor and Mrs. Fred E. Yunker of the town of Orland have reached the 25th milestone in their wedded life and on Thursday evening, February 6th they will observe the silver wedding anniversary by inviting all their relatives and friends to their silver wedding celebration at the Bachelor Grove dance hall, 145th street and Oak Park ave., north of Tinley Park. The celebration will begin at eight o'clock.

Mokena Man Discovers Fire In New Lenox Home

Fire Friday night at the home of Russell Durwood in McIntosh subdivision was discovered by Lawrence Kohl of Mokena.

He was on his way to Bentleys when he first noticed the fire. He continued on, Frank Valenta Bentleys' hired man, and Mr. Kohl went to Durwoods and notified them of the fire.

It started in the garage, where a coal stove was burning, and a car charger was also running. The fire destroyed the automobile, garage, and chicken coop. A small calf and two dozen chickens also perished.

Mr. Durwood had no insurance. The fire was discovered about 6:30 o'clock.

Form New Lions Club At Frankfort

Business and professional men of Frankfort have formed a local Lions Club with 20 charter members and with the following temporary officers:

Attorney Albert Krusemark, Jr., president; Arthur Bauch, Vice-President; secretary, George Brandau.

Friday night of this week the permanent officers of the club were to be elected at an organization dinner.

Mokena Boy Scouts to Re-Register

Monday night, Feb. 3rd the Mokena Boy Scouts will have a re-registration ceremony. All the parents of the Scouts are expected to be present and all interested members of the community are invited, particularly the members of the Civic Association.

Mokena Veterans and Civic Group Secure America First Speaker

Werner's Hardware 1 Year Old

A year ago on February first, Orville Werner opened a hardware store in the Hacker building on the Front street in Mokena. During the year his store has shown a remarkable business growth and Mr. Werner has one of the nicest up-to-date stores of its kind in this section. In addition to the usual hardware items, Mr. Werner handles radios, refrigerators, paints, wall paper, etc.

Quality goods and prices that compare favorably and under many of the larger stores, have been a big factor in the growth of the business together with a good use of advertising space.

Mr. Werner is observing his first anniversary with an anniversary sale this week and special attention is directed to the half page adv. he is running in this issue. Above all take advantage of the specials offered.

Receives Carload of New Tractors

Henry Bechstein, the new John Deere farm implement dealer in Tinley Park is preparing for spring business. Wednesday he received a carload of new John Deere tractors. He has other farm machinery coming in soon.

Over 400 People Attend Booster Dance

The dance sponsored by the Orland Park Boosters Club Saturday night at the Goodings Grove dance hall was attended by over 400 people.

The crowd was a very congenial one and were good mixers. All had a fine time. People attending the affair came from Mokena, Lockport, Homer, Orland, Tinley Park, Worth and other adjoining communities.

Plenty of eats and drinks were on hand and a ten piece orchestra from LaGrange furnished excellent music.

The following prices were also awarded: Mrs. Dorothy Lester, of Lockport, a radio; Mrs. Wm. Little of Worth, an electric cooker; Ernest Cione, 143rd and Harlem east of Orland, an electric floor lamp.

New Mokena Sewing Center Opened

The Mokena branch of American Red Cross opened the sewing center in the McGowney building Monday afternoon with 21 ladies present. There were 218 surgical dressings made that afternoon. A good many ladies also met there Tuesday afternoon at which time a large number more dressings were made.

Sweaters are being knit and clothing is being made for refugees. The material for all this is furnished by the government.

We urge all ladies who possibly can spare an hour or an afternoon, to come to the sewing center next Monday and let it be known the day and hour at which they can help in this work.

The nation has finally been aroused by the threat of war as contained in the Lend-Lease bill (1776). Yes, the American people are waking up, as they usually do when their cherished liberties are in danger. Should the power of war-making be vested in our President? That is the question which is being decided in every corner of our country. In public town meetings, in smoke-filled committee rooms, in congressional halls, in country stores everywhere the American people are debating the Lend-Lease Bill now pending before Congress.

This is a healthy sign. We, the people should know, must know what our representatives are doing for our welfare. Mokena will have the opportunity to learn more about the Lend-Lease Bill. The Civic Association backed by the Veterans of Foreign Wars has been able to secure a speaker to clarify the details of this bill for us. One week from today, Friday, Feb. 7 is the date set for a good old-fashioned town meeting in Hatch's Hall. The speaker will talk for twenty minutes and then the audience will be asked to bombard him with questions. Here is a chance to get a clear understanding about a burning question before the country today. Everyone in Mokena and surrounding towns is urged to come and hear this speaker. The meeting will start at 8 o'clock. Keep this date open.

Big Free Show Tinley Saturday

Saturday night, Feb. 1st is a very special date at Tinley Park for on that night Elmer Siemsen, the McCormick-Deering dealer at Tinley Park is sponsoring a big free entertainment program with the aid of the company at the Tinley Park school gym. Radio and screen stars will be featured in person.

FEBRUARY HOSTESS? TREAT GUESTS TO A PATRIOTIC TEA
(See Recipes Below.)

FEBRUARY IS A PARTY MONTH

February is a party month; every hostess calendar should have the twelfth, the fourteenth, and the twenty-second ringed in red! And this year, with the renewed emphasis on patriotism which the world crisis has brought, there's every reason to make Washington's and Lincoln's birthdays occasions for more patriotic partying than usual.

No holiday in February lends itself to a tea quite like Washington's birthday. But instead of tea, serve coffee with squares of hot, fragrant gingerbread as you see it in the picture above. The spicy squares are much in keeping with the day, for Washington's mother was said to have been famous for her gingerbread. Make it by your own special recipe or use one of the packaged gingerbread mixes. All that you will need for decorations is a bowl of flowers and the silhouettes of George and Martha Washington mounted on white paper and hung to form a background for the tea table. As a part of the food for the occasion, serve a minted pear salad with small deviled hot breads. These are tender, crunchy biscuit hearts with the top section cut out to show the deviled ham filling. Let the beverage be a deep red cranberry punch and garnish each cup with a cube of pineapple stuck on a pick. If you wish to have a second course, small cakes or ice cream molds will finish the menu in fine style.

A sugar heart cake is a dessert which any hostess could serve with pride when a few friends come in for Valentine's day evening. Fine white cake is put together with a creamy chocolate filling, and the cake-top is decorated with confectioners' sugar sifted through a lace doily with a heart motif on it. When the doily is removed, the design remains, etched neatly in sugar on the cake.

Cranberry Punch. (Makes 3 quarts)

- 2½ cups sugar
- 6 cups boiling water
- 2 17-ounce cans jellied cranberry sauce
- 1 cup lemon juice
- 1 12-ounce can pineapple cubes
- 1 pint carbonated water
- Cocktail sticks

Rub the jellied cranberry sauce into sugar. Add hot water and heat and stir until well blended. Beat with rotary beater until smooth. Add lemon juice. Drain juice from pineapple cubes and measure; there should be ½ cup. Add pineapple juice to punch mixture and strain through fine sieve or cheese cloth. Chill thoroughly. When ready to serve, place block of ice in punch bowl (or use about 1 quart ice cubes). Pour punch mixture and carbonated water over ice. Insert pineapple cubes onto cocktail sticks and place one in each cup. Fill cups with punch.

Sugar Heart Cake. (Makes 2 9-inch layers)

- 4 cups cake flour
 - 4 teaspoons baking powder
 - ¾ teaspoon salt
 - ¾ cup butter or other shortening
 - 2 cups sugar
 - 2 eggs (unbeaten)
 - 1½ cups milk
 - 2 teaspoons vanilla
- Sift cake flour once before measuring, then add baking powder and salt and sift 3 times. Cream butter until soft, add sugar gradually and cream together until light and fluffy. Add eggs and beat thoroughly. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time. Beat until smooth after each addition. Then add vanilla.

Pour batter into 2 well-greased 9-inch square pans (2 inches deep). Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for 35 to 40 minutes. Put together as layer cake, spreading chocolate cream filling between layers. Place lace doily made with heart motif over top of cake. Fasten securely to top of cake with toothpicks. Sprinkle surface generously and evenly with confectioners' sugar. Brush off excess with pastry brush, then remove picks and carefully lift off pattern. The design should be neatly etched in confectioners' sugar.

Chocolate Cream Filling. (Makes 2½ cups)

- 3 squares unsweetened chocolate (3 ounces) (grated)
- 1½ cups milk
- ¾ cup sugar
- 4 tablespoons cake flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 egg (slightly beaten)
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Add chocolate to milk. Heat in double boiler. When chocolate is melted, beat with rotary egg beater to blend. Combine sugar, flour and salt. Add gradually to chocolate mixture and cook until thickened (about 5 minutes), stirring constantly. Then cook 10 minutes longer, stirring occasionally. Pour small amount of mixture over egg, stirring vigorously, return to double boiler. Cook 2 minutes longer, stirring constantly. Then add butter and vanilla and cool.

Patriotic Sandwich Plate. (25 star sandwiches; 40 rolled sandwiches)

- 2 1½-pound loaves sandwich bread
 - Softened butter
 - 2 17-ounce cans jellied cranberry
 - 1 cup dried beef (ground)
 - 4 3-ounce packages cream cheese
 - 4 tablespoons milk
 - 4 teaspoons lemon juice
 - ½ teaspoon onion juice
- Trim crusts from 1 loaf with sharp knife. Slice, lengthwise into ½-inch slices. If very long knife is not available, loaf will be easier to handle if cut in half crosswise before slicing. Wrap slices in damp towel and place in refrigerator for 30 minutes to 1 hour.

Meanwhile slice second loaf lengthwise into ½-inch slices. Cut out sandwiches with star-shaped cutter, then spread with softened butter. Slice jellied cranberry sauce into thin slices and cut into stars with same cutter. Place each slice of cranberry between two slices buttered bread.

Blend cream cheese with milk until softened, then add lemon and onion juice. Combine with ground beef and chopped nuts. Remove sliced bread from refrigerator, unwrap, and spread with softened butter, then with filling. Roll tightly into long rolls. Wrap each roll in waxed paper and place in refrigerator. When ready to serve, insert a small flag into end of each rolled sandwich. Stand them up around sides of a shallow bowl or basket so that flags hang over edge. Fill center of bowl or basket with star-shaped sandwiches.

Deviled Biscuit Hearts. (Makes 18)

- 2 cups flour (all-purpose)
 - 3 teaspoons baking powder
 - ½ teaspoon salt
 - ¼ cup shortening
 - ¾ cup milk (approximately)
 - 2 2½-ounce cans deviled ham
- Sift flour once before measuring. Add baking powder, salt, and sift together. Cut in shortening, using a pastry blender or two knives, or rub it in with the fingers. Add milk, stirring it in lightly with a fork, until a soft dough forms. Turn onto a lightly floured board and knead for a few seconds. Roll out to about ¼ inch in thickness. Cut with a heart-shaped cutter. Remove the centers from half the biscuits. To do this, fold biscuit in half and cut out center with kitchen scissors, leaving a narrow rim. Spread deviled ham on whole biscuits, top with rims and bake in a hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit) for 12 to 15 minutes. Serve hot to accompany salad.

Blood Tests For Cause and Cure of Cancer

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

BECAUSE the cause of cancer has not yet been found, many may wonder if all the time and effort that is being spent on cancer is worth while. As a matter of fact, the number of "supposed" causes that have been proved not to be causes is very large and that it will not be necessary to investigate them further is a great step forward.

Dr. W. E. Ogden of Toronto, and his associates, by an examination of the blood were able to discover those who were likely to develop tuberculosis. That an examination of the blood might show those with cancer or likely to develop cancer is reported by Dr. O. S. Gruner, Montreal, in the Canadian Medical Association Journal. He describes the pattern characteristic of cancer, in detail, and points out that the more numerous and better the grouping of the lines, the more advanced is the cancer considered to be. "The fact that cancerous blood really produces differences which are uniform in kind is readily established even with a few dozen tests."

Dr. Gruner performed the crystallization on 122 patients in whom the existence of cancer had been proved, on 20 cancer patients who had been treated, on 33 patients without cancer, and on a considerable number of normal and cancer bearing animals.

Results of Test.

What were the results obtained by this examination? The results obtained on patients at Royal Victoria hospital, Montreal, gave positive results in 110 of the 122 proved cases of cancer; that is, the readings were correct in 90 per cent of the cases. In 33 cases without cancer (apparently) one positive reading was obtained.

Of the 20 cases of cancer that had been treated, 11 were negative, that is, no cancer was then present.

Dr. Gruner states that if blood shows cancer present and yet it cannot be found, cancer may still be present. On the other hand, if the test is repeatedly positive, the patient should be watched carefully.

Iodine Powder For Running Ear

A "RUNNING" ear may not be regarded as a serious matter because as long as it continues to run—no backing up of pus or discharge—the condition may be considered "safe" and not likely to require a mastoid operation.

However, this continuous discharge from the ear often means a run down condition, and the discharge itself means that the body, in addition to its other work, is manufacturing a useless substance. To clear up this chronic discharge and so build up the patient's health is often a difficult matter.

Dr. M. D. Lederman and others blow a 1 to 2 per cent of iodine powder into the middle ear to clean up and dry up the discharge. Dr. Lederman in Laryngoscope now reviews his 20 years' experience with iodine powder (Sulzberger).

"The powder is made by mixing a solution of tincture of iodine with dry powdered boric acid and evaporating the solvent or liquid part. This leaves a brownish-colored powder which contains 1 or 2 per cent iodine, depending on the proportions used. The 1 per cent is first used in chronic suppuration (pus condition) of the ear. The cleansing is best done by absorbent cotton on tips of the applicators (instruments). After all the pus and liquid is removed, the middle ear cavity is wiped out with 95 per cent alcohol, then dried, after which the powder is blown in. This is repeated once a day to twice a week—depending on the quantity of the discharge—until the ear is dry. Irrigation or washing of the ear by the patient should be avoided, but if the patient must be away for a time, he may use drops of alcohol containing the powder. If the ear does not clear up with the weak (1 per cent) powder, the strong 2 per cent preparation should be used."

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Has any treatment similar to the nerve root injections for asthma been developed to relieve nasal stoppage?

A.—The injections for asthma are to deaden or anesthetize the nerves supplying the little tubes so that tubes will not tighten or close. These injections would not be of help for enlarged turbinates. Treatment for enlarged turbinates is a "shrinking" solution like salt or adrenalin, use of cautery to burn turbinate bones, or operation.

A LETTER TO MR. DISNEY

Dear Walter Disney:

I have just read in the papers that you do not think a child could possibly be scared by any of the weird effects in your new picture, "Fantasia," particularly by the episodes in "Night on Bald Mountain," and while you may be right, what about the grownups? I give you my word, Walt, that the scenes in that episode had me creepy for days and I still ain't sleeping well. If that comes under the head of entertainment, then a great idea for the Follies would be a night in a morgue.

You are a genius in my book, Walter, and nobody is even a close second to you in movie entertainment, but it would be okay by me and, I think, most movie fans, if you would cut out a tendency to go in for the creepy stuff. You could throw out the entire night on Bald Mountain and do the nerve doctors and psychopathic ward attendants a great favor.

I know this is supposed to interpret a musical composition for drums, bass fiddles, cymbals, horse pistols, dynamite caps and saxophonists with the D.T.'s, but if it does so, then Moussorgsky should have stayed in bed where he could never make the hair of a movie fan stand on end, man or boy.

"Fantasia" is a beautiful thing full of what the critics call enchantment, but a smart spectator will grab his hat and make for the nearest exit when the Bald Mountain stuff starts. It is nothing but 20 minutes of skeletons, ghosts, fiendish gibbets and assorted apparitions flying across the screen like they was fugitives from Hades, and I mean the basement not the mezzanine floor. A skeleton rates at the bottom of the list for purposes of public entertainment, anyhow, even if it is a quiet, dignified unassuming skeleton. And when a skeleton turns out to be a jitterbug acting as if it was being auditioned for a ballet it is no good to nobody now, even with the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra as sponsor.

The episode should be retitled "Heebie-Jeebies in Technicolor."

Give them skeletons two weeks' notice, Walt, and give Bald Mountain back to Hitler, where it must have come from.

Yours for fewer goose pimples, with sound.

Elmer Twitchell.

BACK HOME STUFF (In the other world war.)

"Don't Talk War" signs hung behind the bars of all the cafes in town. . . . The town's best-known saloon owner, who for years had worn his mustache Kaiser style, suddenly found himself in a spot. . . . There were German spy scares every day. . . . A fellow dropped into the local newspaper office from the New York Tribune to promote a fund for "Marjorie's Battleship". . . . There was talk of meatless days and heatless nights. . . . Nearly every war bulletin mentioned Von Kluck's left wing. . . . The Kaiser had promised the troops Christmas dinner in Paris. . . . President Wilson aroused a storm of editorial comment by declaring "There is such a thing as being too proud to fight". . . . Remember?

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood. You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination. Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of pulse approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

Tinley Park Community NEWS

For those interested in sewing for the Red Cross there will be displayed, in the Town Hall, garments, sweaters, layettes and hospital garments, this to be on Tuesday, Feb. 4 in the afternoon. These articles can be made in your own home and will be returned to the Chicago office every two weeks. For all those who need to brush up on their knitting there will be someone to instruct you. All these materials will be furnished by the Red Cross and for this service you are to be given Red Cross service pins.

This is a get-together meeting to see how many may desire to devote some of their spare time for a great cause. For what we do for others sometimes does not have to be done for us. Tell your friends about this, particularly those whom you know, perhaps, have been waiting for just this opportunity to do their bit. Mrs. Ebenhack, Red Cross Chair.

ALFREDA WILLMAN, Scribe.

AUXILIARY NEWS
At our last meeting January 24, we celebrated the 10th anniversary of the Unit. A large crowd attended including the Unit Mother, Mrs. Suthers and many others from the district.

Each chairman gave a short report on what they had done so far this year. It was shown how the Unit had progressed from year to year and how the membership has grown.

Trudie Swisher read a poem naming each one of the past presidents and mentioned their outstanding achievement.

Mrs. Suthers gave a very nice talk on the aims and purposes of the Legion Auxiliary.

After the meeting adjourned a lunch of sandwiches, coffee, ice cream and cake was served on beautiful decorated tables of gold and blue. The centerpiece being a large cake given to the Unit by the Legion Post.

Mrs. Suthers was presented with a gift from the past presidents. Bunco was played and all went home after a most enjoyable evening.

The hostesses were, Viola Carr, Celia Jones, Marie Hagedorn, Dena Hansen, Mary Maxwell and her camp fire girls.

Our next meeting will be Feb. 14. —Gertrude Jacobs, Publicity Chairman

Melody & Mirth At Roxy Theatre

Melody, mirth and mystery are all congealed into Kay Kyser's newest picture, "You'll Find Out," coming to the Roxy theatre at Lockport, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, starring the brilliant performances of Ye Ole Professor and his band and company, Peter Lorre, Boris Karloff and Helen Parrish.

This Friday and Saturday, the Roxy will feature a twin billing of "The Texas Rangers Ride Again" with John Howard and Ellen Drew and "Always A Bride" with Rosemary Lane in a romantic theme.

Next Sunday, the Roxy theatre will feature "Love Thy Neighbor" starring those two scrapping comedians of the air lanes, Jack Benny and Fred Allen, who bring their verbal jousts to the celluloid tape in one of the most hilarious comedies of the cinema season.

Did the new bowler on the Wonder Girls team take the breath out of some? Her average should give the wonder girls a real lift. She dropped from the high heavens but she was a god-send. What a spill Snyder took on the alley. Did it effect your score Marge or were you too excited over picking up the 5-7-10 pins in a practice game?

FRANKFORT

Mrs. Herbert Kohlhaugen

The Royal Neighbors will sponsor a card party in the Village Hall on February 5.

The Royal Neighbors will have their regular meeting in the Village Hall on February 6.

Mrs. Ernestine Clement nee Schroth, age 48, died on January 21, in the home of her daughter Mrs. Joyce Purdy in Lockport.

Mrs. Clement died after a short illness. She spent her childhood and youth here and was a member of the Frankfort Public School Alumni of the class of 1906.

She is survived by her husband, George, two sons Floyd Vance and LeRoy Clement of Joliet; one daughter Mrs. Joyce Purdy of Lockport; two step-sons Donald Clement of Joliet; Walter Clement of Washington; two step-daughters Dorothy Clement of Pennsylvania, and Ione Clement of Joliet; two brothers Andrew Schroth of Frankfort and Henry Schroth of Oregon; 4 sisters Mrs. Margaret Boettcher of Joliet, Mrs. Amelia Wilkie of Oregon, Mrs. Frieda Jensen of Chebanse, Ill., and Mrs. Anna Klier of Frankfort and two grandchildren.

Her funeral was held on Friday, January 24 with Rev. W. D. Wood officiating. Burial was made in Elmhurst cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. Burton Briedert entertained relatives on Sunday, Jan. 26. A family dinner was enjoyed after which a social evening was spent.

Miss Corinne Krusemark, student of the University of Illinois is enjoying a few days with her parents Attorney and Mrs. Albert Krusemark Sr.

Little Janice Mae Johnson recently celebrated her third birthday in her home. A dinner was served to relatives and friends with a large birthday cake as the center of attraction.

Mr. Edward Ross of Chicago who appeared on WCFL Chicago radio station on January 19 on the Reuben's Opportunity Hour was awarded first prize of a diamond wrist watch. He will have the opportunity to appear on the "Stars of Tomorrow" program on Thursday, Feb. 6 at 8:45 p.m. Edward is certainly grateful for all the support he received from his friends who cast their votes for him.

The Frankfort Grade School teams played Monee teams on Friday, Jan. 24 and were victorious in both. They will play Mokena Grade and High School teams on Friday, Jan. 31 in Mokena.

The Frankfort Independent Basketball teams played the Bethlehem Mission teams of Joliet on Sunday, Jan. 26. The Lights of Frankfort won by a score of 26 to 16 but the Heavies lost by a score of 26 to 21. Downers Grove teams will play here on Sunday, February 2.

The Amite Sewing club members with their families enjoyed a social evening on Friday, Jan. 24 in the Village Hall. A supper was served at 6:30 p.m., after which pinocle was the pastime. Mrs. Herbert Kohlhaugen will entertain the club in her home on Tuesday, Feb. 4.

The Ernest Pfeifer family have moved into the home of Mrs. Ida Lankenau until their new home in New Lenox is completed. Mrs. Lankenau will visit in the home of Mr. Richard Oetter in the meantime. Mr. John Harnack has purchased the Pfeifer home and has moved into it.

The Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church will have their regular meeting on February 6 in the social room of the church. In connection they will enjoy the yearly Valentine party and a pot-luck dinner will be served at noon.

Mr. Milton Subbert underwent an appendicitis operation on Jan. 16 in St. James Hospital, Chicago Heights and is recovering very satisfactorily.

Leroy Jarchow, son of Albert Jarchow, who had an operation for appendicitis, is convalescing from the same in the home of his uncle and aunt Mr. and Mrs. Homer Smith.

Robert Tewes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Tewes, is recovering from a severe case of pneumonia.

Elmer Reuchert is improving nicely from a recent operation.

Miss Viola Lankenau, intermediate teacher in the public school was off duty for a few days due to illness.

The Frankfort housewives will be very busy next week because many of them have made arrangements to attend the book school to be held in the Rialto theatre in Joliet on the mornings of February 4th to 7th inclusive.

Miss Katherine Priami who is a student at the University of Illinois is spending the week end with her parents.

Announce
Change of Headquarters

Headquarters of the National Youth Administration area number two will be moved Feb. 1 from Chicago to Chicago Heights Heights it was announced by Clarence A. Bolton, who is the NYA director.

The area which the office serves includes the counties of Cook (outside Chicago), DuPage, Will, Kane, Kendall, Grundy, Lake, Kankakee and Iroquois.

The new location for the area office, which was approved by State NYA Administrator Mary Stuart Anderson is at 12 Illinois street. The decision to move the area headquarters to Chicago Heights was made by Director Bolton because of its central location in the 9-county area which he heads. He pointed out that the transfer will make it possible to facilitate administrative functions of his office. Most of the office personnel of 18 members have indicated they will establish their homes in Chicago Heights or vicinity.

New Automatic Direction Finding Device Determines Position of Airplane in Flight

By WILLIAM KELLER

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

CHICAGO.—The danger of commercial aircraft becoming lost because of inclement weather or faulty navigation has been practically eliminated by a revolutionary new invention. Location of a plane in flight is automatically recorded at ground stations by an automatic direction finding radio receiver developed by radio technicians under J. P. Cunningham, United Air Lines' director of communications.

Four years of study and experimentation were conducted under Cunningham and Sandretto, head of the company's radio laboratory, before the direction finder reached its present stage of perfection.

An amazing degree of accuracy has been obtained by the device. Cunningham reports that tests conducted over a period of more than a year reveal that better than 99 per cent of the bearings made by the new receiver proved to be accurate.

Entirely automatic, the receiver operates without any special assistance from the plane in flight. It is described as remarkably simple in operation.

Each time that a plane in flight makes its routine half-hour position reports, the receiver acts on the radio waves. Large antenna that form the heart of the instrument pick up these waves. This antenna is constantly being rotated by a motor.

Electric waves picked up by the antenna are transferred to a standard radio receiver which amplifies it into energy. This energy operates a moving pen which draws a line on a scroll chart that constantly unrolls beneath it. The pen traces the form of the wave in a vertical zigzag line which reveals the maximum and minimum strength of the signal.

All bearings are based upon the minimum signal, or "null," as it is called by radio engineers. The null is recorded when the revolving antenna is exactly at right angles to the direction from which the signal is coming.

The null as shown on the chart form can be plotted exactly from a transparent plexiglas plate graduated in degrees which is placed over the chart. The radio operator can then read off the bearing of the airplane in degrees.

It is necessary for at least two stations equipped with the antenna and recorder to work together in triangulating a plane's position. This position is then immediately radioed to the pilot who uses the report to check upon his own navigation.

If three stations take bearings simultaneously from a plane in flight, lines from the stations are projected on a map. The exact position of the plane will be shown by the point on the map where the lines intersect.

"In practice," Cunningham explained, "we will use two or more ground stations simultaneously in receiving the reports from any given airplane. The bearings obtained by these stations will be electrically transmitted to our key dispatching posts on the transcontinental route. There the bearings can be plotted on charts in a few seconds and we thus know the location of every plane within a mile or two.

"For practical purposes, with a

Operation of the new airplane location recorder is illustrated by this sketch. Ground stations equipped with the device automatically receive bearings on a plane every time its radio transmitter is used. By taking simultaneous bearings, stations A or B, which are on the airway, can determine the plane's position with the help of C or D which are off the airway. At the lower left is shown the revolving antenna which makes the high degree of accuracy possible.

swiftly moving object like an airplane, this is 100 per cent accuracy."

Cunningham added that the first station is now being installed at Salt Lake City. United Airlines expects to install about 20 to serve its entire system from coast to coast.

Finding directions by radio is not a new science. It was known in 1912 when radio was still in its infancy and was used at sea during the World war of 1914-1918. Pan-American Airways engineers subsequently developed a long range direction finding receiver. This receiver gave fairly satisfactory results over water where radio signals are more effective than land.

Unsatisfactory results were obtained about 1935 when the Pan-American system was tried over land. Since then an antenna system that would operate over land has been sought by a number of radio manufacturers, the army and the navy.

Accurate results up to 80 per cent of the time were attained by a number of systems, but this was not considered sufficiently safe for use with passenger carrying planes.

Static interference was the fundamental cause of trouble with most of these direction finding receivers. It spoils signals and gives inaccurate nulls. Because United's device produces visual charts it is possible to weed out the bad bearings.

The army and navy are deeply interested in the receiver. It has been offered to other airlines in the United States.

Low-Income Families Use Housing Projects

WASHINGTON.—Nearly half of the families who live in the low-rent housing projects of the United States Housing authority have incomes of $2.50 a day or less.

For these families that $2.50 or less—the price of a decent hotel room to most Americans—must cover the daily cost of food, rent, clothes, and all the other things it takes to live. In some cases that daily income averages out to little more than a dollar.

A survey of the incomes of more than 12,000 tenant families released by USHA shows that 47.8 per cent earn less than $899 a year. In the case of 2.6 per cent of the families the annual income is actually under $400.

Only 7 per cent of the families—with many mouths to feed and in areas of unusually high living costs—have incomes of as much as $100 a month, according to USHA Administrator Nathan Straus.

'Gyp' Schools Rise To Offer Training For Defense Jobs

MINNEAPOLIS.—"Racket" trade schools are springing up all over the United States to take advantage of the anxiety of young men to secure quick training for defense jobs.

Like most rackets, the "gyp" job-training school is flourishing on a wave of popular enthusiasm for something legitimate, and is "muscling in" among the many legitimate schools for trade and vocational training.

The job of separating the good schools from the bad is complicated for the ambitious young job seeker by the fact that some new trade schools are entirely legitimate and have been established due to the fact that many older schools are already crowded to capacity and have long waiting lists.

High pressure salesmen for the "gyp" schools have already filched the savings and secured the contract signatures of thousands of ambitious young job seekers by "guaranteeing" jobs with the big airplane plants and other defense production industries, and by representing that their schools have "deals" with such companies to supply them with trained employees, according to a report by the Northwestern National Life Insurance company.

The situation has become so bad that major aircraft companies have been flooded with inquiries and complaints regarding "guaranteed placements" promised by such salesmen; several California companies have issued warning bulletins to the effect that they had authorized no such agreements, understandings, or guarantees. Chambers of Commerce in various defense industry centers are issuing warnings on the subject.

The report emphasizes that the two principal faults of the "racket" trade school are to oversell the opportunity in the first place and to undertrain in the second place.

The report suggests simple tests which any youth can apply to the school he is considering, before he pays any money down or signs an application blank. He should demand a list of recent graduates of the school. He should get in touch with several such graduates, either by personal contact or by letter, and ask them the following three simple questions:

1. Was the course satisfactory?
2. Did it help you to secure a job?
3. Has it helped you win advancement in your job, or if you have been employed only a short time, do you feel that it is likely to help you win advancement?

In the case of a newly established school the prospective student should enlist the help of some older friend, to investigate the financial responsibility of the sponsors, the completeness of the equipment, and the previous connections of the instructors. Public school authorities can usually give helpful information about a local private school, and the report emphasizes that a legitimate school will welcome investigation.

The report also warns that a certain proportion of young men, due to individual tastes, mental characteristics, and personality type, could not be fitted to hold a job in a mechanical or technical trade. Therefore, the legitimate trade schools invariably examine the qualifications of the applicant and refuse to accept those who they feel cannot be successfully trained. The "gyp" school exercises no such selection, but accepts any applicant who can raise the amount of the down payment.

Scientific Research Increases in Petroleum Industry

PITTSBURGH.—Research in the petroleum industry has expanded 539 per cent in the past 11 years, Dr. William A. Hamor, associate director of the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research, Pittsburgh, Pa., says in a survey reported in Industrial and Engineering Chemistry, journal of the American Chemical society. The industry now ranks second in scientific investigation, having risen from seventh place.

About 26,000,000,000 gallons of gasoline were produced last year. This output could be increased if needed to over 40,000,000,000 gallons in a short while, according to Dr. Hamor.

"Octane rating motor fuels of 100 and over are produced for aviation use, and these products may be utilized in pleasure cars within five years," Dr. Hamor predicted. "In aircraft work a fuel system is wanted which will compensate for the drop in pressure at high altitudes."

Demand for workers in defense industries may bring inflation . . . British air marshal fears improvements in war planes bars mass production.

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—Tremendous demand for workers in the defense industries may be the straw on the proverbial camel's back that will produce such a strong advance in prices that inflation will be with us.

Despite all the possibilities for inflation which have existed now for so many years, and despite the frantic inability of investors to find anything that seemed a perfectly satisfactory "hedge" against inflation, prices have really not advanced.

Ever since the government commandeered gold, one of the stock questions for argument among economists has been: "Suppose you had $100,000 to invest and were worried about inflation, what would you do with it?"

This question is more pertinent now than ever, and no one knows the answer.

Some people with a little money, and some with a great deal, have bought farms. Some have bought unimproved real estate, and some low-cost buildings. But with local taxes on the upscale everywhere, it is questionable whether, over a period of time, these "hedges" will prove sound.

It would seem obvious that a bond selling close to, or above par, is NOT a good thing to have if inflation comes. The dollars will be worth less. Yet there has been no weakening of sound bond prices since the latest signs pointing to higher prices.

SAVINGS DEPOSITS RISE
It would also seem a certainty that money in savings banks would not be a good notion if one's dollars are to be worth less—yet there has been no falling off in savings banks deposits. Quite the contrary.

The demand for workers, and especially skilled workers, by the defense industries is practically certain to result in considerable wage advances.

Fatter pay envelopes may not have much logical connection with higher prices at the stores for everything one buys, but the two things go together; always have and probably always will.

In the period just ahead, moreover, there is another element calculated to bring about an advance of prices. This is the almost certain restriction, as the situation develops, of industries regarded as unnecessary to defense. This will naturally produce a shortage in the articles made by these industries, and this spells inevitable advance in the prices of those articles.

More direct, however, are the unavoidable effects on cost of production of nonmilitary articles. For if the defense industries are raiding others for workers, and the defense workers succeed in prying out wage increases, wage advances in the OTHER industries are inevitable. So that the basic cost of nondefense articles will actually, though indirectly, be forced up by the defense industries.

Mass Production Of Airplanes Unlikely

The tremendous difficulty of applying automobile mass production methods to the building of airplanes for war purposes is such that in the opinion of Sir Hugh Dowding, British air marshal now on visit in this country, it is not likely to be surmounted.

Sir Hugh picked up a report from Detroit that the United States army had insisted on a change in piston rings and a pin just as the auto engine people had gotten squared away for production.

"That is a perfect illustration," he said. "You can put an engine on a block and run it for the required number of hours. It will function perfectly. Then you put that engine, or another precisely like it, in an airplane and send it up. Something may go wrong, which did not develop in the block tests. But if you find that the engine must be taken down, and new piston rings and pins put in after every flight, then obviously there must be a change in that engine."

"Obviously, there are always improvements and always changes. They will go on. The latest improvement may be the deciding factor in the battle in which that plane engages. But there are different varieties of change. One is essential. That is illustrated by the case of that engine with faulty piston rings and pins. Another might be illustrated by a change which would get 20 more horsepower out of an engine."

Sir Hugh was most interesting in his comments on why the much advertised Italian air force had been such a flop in the war. He laid it to two reasons. First, that the Italians as individuals had no stomach for the war.

The second was more military—Italian planes and aviators are definitely inferior to the British.

CHAPTER XIII

Virgie took a letter that Lucy handed her, unfolded the single sheet of cheap gray paper, read it through twice. The envelope was marked "Personal." The handwriting was angular and labored, the script of one who expresses himself in writing only at rare intervals.

"Did you take a look at this?" she asked.

"No, Mrs. Morgan. It was marked personal—I opened the envelope but I didn't look at the letter."

"It's from Wallace Withers. He wants to come to my house tonight to talk business, so he says."

Lucy brightened. "Then he has decided to sell that Bennett spruce. He'll try to get three prices out of you, Mrs. Morgan."

"He's sure to try something. I've known Wallace all my life—the old scorpion. The last time he came to see me he tried to talk me into marrying him because he said I didn't know enough to run this mill."

"But you couldn't! Why, Mrs. Morgan, his poor first wife never did come to town. I don't suppose she ever had more than one decent dress in her whole married life."

"I didn't marry him, did I? I may be getting soft in a few spots, but not in that one. Lucy, you listen. I want you to come out to that conference. If Withers has any idea of selling that spruce I want a record of it. He'll try to work some kind of racket. You can make notes of everything. He says he wants to talk business—well, when I talk business my secretary is present. I'll have Marian there, too. I'd like to have young Wills—where is he?"

"He went up in the woods with the truck."

"Well, I'm glad somebody went besides me. Marian thinks I look like an old fool trailing around in the mud, climbing over timber and wading creeks, a fat old woman like me. Anyway, it's a poor executive who can't get somebody to do the dirty work."

"You're not a poor executive, Mrs. Morgan. Nobody else could have pulled the mill through—"

"I know. You've told me. I reckon I'd better not have Wills out. You can handle anything that needs to be done. I'll send the car after you."

Wills would probably refuse to come to the house, anyway, because of Marian. Marian's attitude was still an enigma to her mother. Marian had always been a bright gift that Virgie was grateful for, but a gift that left her bewildered and a little uncertain and abashed. She found herself constantly contriving to please Marian or to avoid her displeasure, and this was all wrong, of course. Nonsense, being bossed around by ninety-odd pounds of black-eyed girl, but that was the foolishness of mothers. And mothers loved it. They put up a spiritless fight against the dainty tyranny, the disturbing sense of inferiority, the whims and humors forced upon them by their young.

When they did fight they came off bad seconds, usually, and were pitifully patient about that.

Lucy, on the other side of the desk, was swallowing nervously and the red was coming up into her cheeks and throat.

"Mrs. Morgan," she began, in a little rush, "if you think it would be wise, Mr. Daniels might come to the conference tonight?"

"What for?" Virgie asked, bluntly. "Wallace Withers is an old sourpuss. I know that—but I don't need a chemist to find out how acid he is."

"You spoke about Mr. Wills—"

Lucy bridled slightly. "Wills has got that spruce to cut, if I buy it. But I may not buy it. I'd like to let old Withers talk himself blue in the gills and then just blandly tell him we don't need his timber—the worst about that is, we do need it."

"We can run another month on what we have in," Lucy was ready with her little book, "and then we could begin thinning on the Bobcat Run stuff."

"I don't want to cut on Bobcat. Not for another year if I can help it. Call up Bryson, Lucy, and ask him if he has any of that cider left that hasn't got too darned explosive. There might be a way to limber up old Withers. Most every man has a loose joint somewhere."

"I don't believe Mr. Withers has any. He's made like one of those dry land turtles—all shell and claws and mouth and no soft spot."

"You're real bright at times, Lucy," Virgie applauded. "Just don't forget to be bright—that's all. It's that fifteen-minute interval when a woman forgets that God puts brains inside her head as well as eyelashes on the side of it that ruins a lot of 'em."

"I won't forget."

She will, though, Virgie thought, wearily, as she crossed the yard to back her old car out of the shed. That cool-headed young chap from Missouri would give Lucy two languishing looks and reduce her insistently to the compliant softness of a vanilla custard. But the Lord, so Virgie decided, looked after the soft women. It was the tough ones who could take it who had a hard time. The soft ones lay back and whimper and finally somebody else jumped up, with a gallant flourish to carry their load and help them over the steep places.

"But an old battle-ax like me can change her own tires or get herself out of holes. Nobody bothers!"

The sun was dropping behind the black rampart of the mountains as Virgie drove homeward.

The eastern slopes sank into purple shadows, the valleys were lost in a citron-colored mist. But beyond the aloof crests, cold-looking and forbidding now as the mountains are in winter, a saffron line of light burned along the sky. Virgie admired the brilliance briefly, considered the fact that the Almighty seemed to take a lot of trouble to make every act of nature splendid and beautiful. Trees could have been dirty brown or gray, but they weren't. Even stripped of their leaves they were interesting and graceful.

And rocks were softened and made lovely by lichen and waterfall, ferns and the mystery of shadows. Storms, too, were beautiful. The piling anger of the clouds, the fiery skeleton bones of lightning, the silver marching of the rain. And fire—though it had the color of terror, had glory. There was the pink and purple of laurel and rhododendron in the spring, the white candelabra of dogwood set in the forests in spring, the flame of azalea.

Only in making man had the fine brush and chisel of the Creator slipped. Men were a sorry piece of work, so Virgie thought. Dreary to look at, most of them, full of silly hates and greedinesses, schemes to defeat and destroy each other, all to no profit.

Wars and politics, angers and absurdities, these men had made; going on their scrambling way, adding little to the beauty and serenity of the world. The black scald, bristling with broken, burned trunks and charred stumps—men had done that. Mank Pressly had a still up there somewhere, and his fire had got away from him, burned up the still and six kegs of raw whisky before it tore down the ridge to ruin four or five hundred acres of fair timber. And with it had gone thousands of Virgie's little seedling trees.

Surveying this blackened, month-old ruin, Virgie thought of Tom. The man Cragg lived on, and Tom stubbornly refused to be released from the jail. He was a fanatic old fool, he had gone a little mad as lonely old men sometimes do. And here was Wallace Withers scheming to cheat her and she was alone, with no one to go to for the steady courage that comes with approval.

Fires were burning in the house, for a wonder, and Marian was curled in a big chair under her father's portrait. Marian stayed alone too much lately, was too still.

"Wallace Withers is coming here tonight to sell me some timber," Virgie said at dinner. "I want you to go and get Lucy—then both of you stay around. I don't trust that old man and I want somebody to hear every word that he says."

"Why doesn't he come to the office if he wants to talk business? Why does he come to the house?" Marian asked.

Virgie was a little bothered to find an answer for this. It was incredible, of course, that Wallace might still be harboring some mad idea that his proposal would again be listened to.

"I don't know," she said. "He wrote me a letter. I'm telling you what he said. He's come here before."

"That's just it. Mother"—Marian sat up a little straighter and looked a trifle grim—"doesn't it ever occur to you that you are supposed to be a wealthy widow?"

Virgie buttered a biscuit, her mouth dragged into a dry grin.

"If anything like that did occur to me, all I'd have to do is go down to the bank and have a heart-to-heart talk with some facts and figures. That's about the most awakening thing I know of. What is all this? Have you seen a peacock-blue roadster you can't live without?"

"I'm not talking about myself. I'm talking about Wallace Withers. He hasn't any wife. He isn't an old man—not terribly old—"

"Oh—that!" Virgie was scornful. "He got ideas—weeks ago. He did ask me to marry him. I guess he knows by now that I'm not interested."

"And you refused him?" Marian asked sharply.

"Did you want him for a stepfather? I didn't think you'd like going over there to live in that moldy old house with no lights and no well."

"Heavens, no! But, Mother"—Marian's voice rose almost to a wail—"you never mentioned it! You never told me! If anything like that happened to me I'd tell you—"

"Would you? I seem to remember a Renfro boy, one time—"

"Oh, that awful infant! As though I would consider a boy like that!"

"Well, I'm not considering Wallace Withers either. Nor anybody else. I felt like a fool—he made me mad and I went off in one of my tantrums—then young Wills came stumbling in here and so much has happened since I forgot all about it."

Marian's eyes cooled, withdrew, then turned upon her mother intent-

"It hasn't occurred to you, has it, Mother, that all these things that have happened—ugly, destructive things that have never happened to us before—began after you hired Branford Wills to work in the mill?"

"What?" Virgie straightened up, the poker in her hand. "What are you talking about?"

"I'm talking"—Marian went on a little breathlessly—"about ruined pulp and fires set to burn the plant, about tracks being torn up, and cars wrecked and shipments delayed. They could be significant, couldn't they? They could mean that the men who've worked for you forever don't want to work with your arrogant young Mr. Wills!"

"There could be," Virgie said slowly, "a wilder idea than that. There could be. But I doubt if there ever was. How could any crazy nut believe that he could get rid of Wills by ruining me? And why are you so poisonous against Wills anyway? He's a nice chap. He can be a lot of help to me."

A sick, ugly doubt crept like a foul-footed creature through Marian

But Wallace refused to be hurried.

Morgan's mind. Older women did get sentimental ideas about young men. It couldn't be—she fought the thought away furiously. Her splendid, courageous, capable mother—low, to let such a suspicion creep into her brain. She breathed deep, and threw back her head, and because she had to ignore and defeat it or be tortured endlessly, she managed a cool remoteness.

"It was an idea I had. I don't think it's insane. I think it's quite reasonable," Marian said as she walked to the door, her eyes more like David's than ever.

Lucy settled herself with her notebook and pencil when Marian brought her back, scarlet spots in her cheeks, her eyes as excited as though she was about to attend a seance.

Marian said, "Do I have to listen when old Withers comes or is it all right to go on reading?"

"You don't have to listen unless you want to. I just want plenty of people around when I have to talk to that old scoundrel."

"Why on earth are you so nervous, Mother, if it's just a business deal?" "I'm not nervous!" snapped Virgie, putting down the ashtray she was fiddling with. "Why should I be nervous?"

"You have been—I've noticed it for days. You know it, Mother."

"It's because so many things are happening," defended Lucy brightly. "I'm nervous myself. Every time I open a filing cabinet I halfway expect a bomb to go off."

"You've been listening to mystery plays on the radio," Marian drawled.

"We don't have a radio," Lucy returned, calmly.

Wallace Withers came promptly. He had on his funeral suit, he was blue-shaven and rather pompous. He looked doubtful when Marian and Lucy Fields were introduced.

"I came up here to talk business," he began.

"Lucy knows all my business," Virgie was short, "and you can talk before my daughter."

Withers settled himself, a bit uneasily, in David Morgan's high-backed chair. Virgie sat, straight and uncompromising, on the opposite side of the fire. She had regained her poise, she felt cool again, in command. Wallace Withers was just another countryman with a shrewd way of getting along. She had handled enough men like him in her career. They began being clumsily gallant, usually, then tried to outsmart her.

Wallace Withers put his long fingers together.

"I've got a matter of some importance to discuss," he began. "I reckon you know what it is?"

"I suppose it's Perry Bennett's timber. You knew I was trading for that piece so you skinned around and got in ahead of me. That wasn't a neighborly thing to do. What do you want for it?" Virgie wasted no words.

Withers studied his knuckles elaborately. "I didn't come up here to talk about the Bennett timber, Vir-gie. It ain't for sale. I got other things on my mind. I reckon you've heard that two fellers from up east—name of Hooper and Payne—have got claims allowed by the court on that piece of stuff Tom Pruitt claims he owns, on Hazel Fork?"

"I heard it. But they won't timber it. I went over day before yesterday and filed foreclosure suits for Tom. So if you got roped into that business and came up here to argue about it, Wallace, you might as well save your breath. Tom's in jail, but he isn't friendless. He's an old man—a mountain man—and he dealt with those skunks like a mountain man would do. But the law won't beat him out of what is his—not if I can help it."

"I didn't come here to talk about Pruitt, either," Wallace went on. "Though I might as well tell you your foreclosure suit won't interfere with Hooper and Payne—not likely. There's claims that come ahead of first mortgages—claims that have got priority in law."

"What claims?"

"Labor claims. A mechanics' lien supersedes most any other kind of claim—you know that, I reckon."

"When did any mechanic ever set foot on Hazel Fork?"

"There was roads built there—and gradin' done and gravel hauled—"

"Mighty sorry roads. And mighty little of them is left now."

"That ain't here nor there, Virgie. The men who built 'em never got paid."

"So this Hooper and Payne and that man Cragg, I suppose, bought up the labor claims?"

"The court allowed the claims they hold. They financed this Phillips' bunch and all they got was notes and liens—with Pruitt's lien standing ahead of 'em. They had to protect themselves. But they're business men—and they think this country has got a future."

"What did you come here to talk to me about?" Virgie demanded, abruptly, while Lucy made little, frightened, scribbling marks on her paper. "When you talk by-products you mean pulp. What's on your mind?"

But Wallace refused to be hurried. He made a steeple with his long fingers, and looked at her blandly over the crest of it.

"There will be," he announced, in an oratorical tone, "big developments in this country—if you don't hinder them, Virgie Morgan."

"I've been developing the country myself, for a few years! I'd be the last person on earth to hinder anything that was for the good of this country. But—you aren't talking about the good of the country, Wallace Withers. You're frying fish of your own—and I want plain talk, not speeches. What's your proposition?"

"With big business men getting behind things, in this country," he went on, still pompously, "I figure to travel with them, Virgie! Not fight 'em or oppose 'em. I don't aim to fight progress. I aim to get into it and make money along with the rest. So I come up here to talk business to you. I figure to buy your mill!"

CHAPTER XIII

There was an instant's silence.

Virgie sat without moving. Marian gave a little startled gasp and Lucy said vaguely, "Why—"

Then Virgie snorted. "I reckon I'll just have to go on standing in the way of progress, Wallace. Because you won't get my mill."

Withers hitched forward, his eyes showing points of anger.

"I reckon you didn't understand me, Virgie. I want your mill—and I'm going to get it. I've got money behind me—big money. I can get the timber and I can get the markets. I figure on getting into the pulp business."

"And just how," Virgie asked deliberately, "do you plan to get possession of my mill?"

"I figure to buy it—at a fair price, taking account of the depreciation in the value of the stock and the depreciation of the property. I got a right to do it." Slow red crept up into his face. "I figure to buy that property and improve it."

"It needs improvement, does it?" "You know the shape that mill's in! Look here, what's that Fields girl writing down everything I say for?"

"This is a business conference. You said so yourself. I may not know enough to run a pulp mill but I do know enough to run a business conference. Lucy's taking notes because I told her to do it."

"You'd better take a note of this, Virgie—I'm offering an opportunity to sell. If you won't sell—then I figure to put you out of business!"

"You did some fancy figuring, didn't you, Wallace? You must have strained your mind, getting all those high aims and ambitions into language. Too bad it's all going to waste—all that brain power. You could run for something and maybe get elected if you put all your eloquence on the job. As it is, you're just wasting your breath. My mill won't be for sale—tomorrow or any other day. Not so long as I can find a green stick in this country to grind into pulp. So—this business conference seems to me to be practically over!"

THE INDIVIDUAL'S RESPONSIBILITY REGARDING BEVERAGE ALCOHOL

LESSON TEXT—Habakkuk 2:15; Genesis 4:1-12; Mark 9:42-48; I Thessalonians 5:22. GOLDEN TEXT—Abstain from every form of evil.—I Thessalonians 5:22, R. V.

"Responsible for the drunkards of my community? Not me; I am against the use of intoxicating liquors." Such is the answer Christian men and women would probably make if faced with that accusation. But wait! Responsibility means more than just refraining oneself or speaking against "booze" in a church meeting. Before we finish the study of our lesson, we may find ourselves guilty of the charge, and needing to ask forgiveness, and see the need of bringing forth works meet unto repentance. We hear God's Word telling us:

I. Do Not Tempt Your Neighbor (Hab. 2:15).

God is very severe in judgment upon those who tempt others. Of course He condemns the one who gives another a drink of liquor. Nothing could be more despicable than thus to start a man or woman on the way to a drunkard's grave. There can be no question about the guilt of the one who makes the stuff and the one who sells it. But beyond that, those are guilty who share in the profits from such a business, who rent their buildings for the manufacture or sale of liquor, who vote to legalize its sale or support politicians who do such things; in fact, everyone who encourages, condones, or in any way profits, whether directly or indirectly, from "the traffic." Are you still "not guilty?"

II. Do Not Fail Your Brother (Gen. 4:9-12).

Everyone who says, "Am I my brother's keeper?" classes himself with the murderer Cain. Certainly I am my brother's keeper. This is the positive side of the matter. It is not enough that I do not tempt my brother. The question is: "Have I neglected to do anything that I could and should have done to save him?"

That makes it my positive business to eliminate every possible temptation. It means that the Christian is vitally concerned about the taverns, road houses, dance halls, and what not, which entrap and destroy our young people. It is not enough to passively lament their presence; we must actively seek their removal. It can be done, and is being done all over the land.

III. Do Not Offend Children (Mark 9:42).

The Lord holds His followers to a high measure of responsibility regarding the children whose lives they touch, whether they be in their own family, or in the community in which they live.

Children are innocent until their elders make them otherwise. In their innocence they are trustful and ready to learn. Their knowledge of the right way to live is received from their parents and other grown-ups, and (mark it well!) they learn more from what we do than from what we say.

Here is the question each one of us should honestly face right now: "How does my daily walk influence the children who see me?" Let us answer that in the light of verse 42.

IV. Abstain From Evil—Judgment Is Coming (Mark 9:43-48; I Thess. 5:22).

The Christian is called to abstain from "all appearance of evil" or, as the Revised Version puts it, "every form of evil" (I Thess. 5:22). That may call for the sternest kind of self-denial (Mark 9:43-47), but why not? We do not follow a Christ who sought for Himself the way of ease or comfort. He gave Himself in complete and willing sacrifice, going even to the death of Calvary's tree for us. Do we then falter and seek the easy way?

The fact that there is a day of judgment to come is something to remember, but may we not stress the other side of the truth. "The very sternness of our Lord's strictures regarding the importance of self-denial only serves to enhance the value of the privilege we enjoy in being citizens of the kingdom of God. If it is worth the loss of a hand, a foot, or an eye to gain that life, then, in view of the great value we place on these members of our bodies, how great must be our divine privilege. Christianity is not merely a negative religion, but it takes the negative smiles to show us the positive glories" (Dr. John W. Bradbury).
